INTRODUCTION & METHODOLOGY

From November 15 – November 20, 2022, DHM Research conducted a survey of Washington voters about public policy issues and voting behaviors during the 2022 general election.

Research Methodology: The online survey consisted of 500 Washington residents (439 who voted in the 2022 general election). This is a sufficient sample size to assess opinions generally and to review findings by multiple subgroups.

Respondents were contacted by using a professionally maintained online panel. A variety of quality control measures were employed, including questionnaire pre-testing and data validation. The sample was modeled to reflect the electorate from the November 2022 general election. To ensure a representative sample, demographic quotas were set, and data were weighted by area of state, age, gender, race, and education. Among voters, quotas were set, and data were weighted by the final vote count from the election for U.S. Senator (Patty Murray versus Tiffany Smiley).

The results presented below include responses to most of the questions asked by DHM Research during this survey. Thirteen questions, and data related to those questions have been omitted because the data belong to DHM Research clients.

Statement of Limitations: Any sampling of opinions or attitudes is subject to a margin of error. The margin of error is a standard statistical calculation that represents differences between the sample and total population at a confidence interval, or probability, calculated to be 95%. This means that there is a 95% probability that the sample taken for this study would fall within the stated margin of error if compared with the results achieved from surveying the entire population. The margin of error for this survey is +/- 4.4%.

DHM Research Background: DHM Research has been providing opinion research and consultation throughout the Pacific Northwest and other regions of the United States for over 40 years. The firm is nonpartisan and independent and specializes in research projects to support public policy making.

[New page]

Recent research suggests that the number of people who fly to western-Washington will double by 2050. A state commission was tasked with finding a suitable location for a second western-Washington airport to supplement Seattle-Tacoma International Airport; the new airport will be about half as large as Seattle-Tacoma International Airport. The commission identified 3 locations suitable for a new airport: 2 in rural Pierce County—about one hour south of Seattle—and 1 in Thurston County just outside of Olympia.
